service overview

laboratory animals transport

NGL pioneered the Next Flight Out business back in 1971 when we began our mission critical transportation services. Since then, we have developed systems and processes that insure the highest levels of on-time service in the market.

Today, we are recognized as a leader in the life science field with the transportation of laboratory animals and clinical research. We have integrated our stringent Standard Operating Procedures to support this industry that the world relies on to develop break through drugs and therapies. NGL has proven methods to insure the safe and humane transport of laboratory animals.

Geographic Reach

Our extensive network of couriers can provide local pickup and delivery service around the corner or around the world. Whether its cross town or regional ground moves in a temperature controlled environment or international collaborations between research partners we can support safe trips and can give both parties full visibility of their shipments at all times.

Customized Time-Critical Transportation Services for Laboratory Animals Same Day Ground, Domestic Sameday Air Service, and Express International Service

24/7/365 Availability

We understand that your animals are incredibly valuable in the dollars of research they represent and the potential life saving and changing effects their research may uncover. That's why we are available around the clock, including weekends and holidays. Our offices are staffed by NGL employees 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, 365 days of the year. We are always available to provide weather condition updates, information on standards of care, and the current status of your very critical shipment.
